City Council vetoes mixed-use development

A mixed residential and commercial project planned for the 8400 block of Broadway was rejected by the Lemon Grove City Council Monday night.

The developers of the property at 8409 Broadway had hoped to build a mixed-use project consisting of a commercial area on the first floor and 12 residential united to be located on the second floor of two buildings. The Planning Commission granted a Conditional Use Permit to the developers, Michael Palmer and Associates, but their decision was appealed by Gerald L. Jones, who operates an auto-repair business near the planned development.

"I'm not trying to stop the project," said Jones at the Monday night meeting, "but the noise studies that were done did not take into account the noise from neighboring businesses."

Other businesses that have been located in the area for several years also generate noise, and the merchants are concerned about future complaints from residents.

Jones proposed that the builders flip the building around so that the apartments do not back up directly onto his business, thus creating more of a noise barrier.

"I believe it is the builders' responsibility to maintain continuity in a community," said Jones.

The City council agreed with him. "I don't like the mixed-use concept and I am convinced by this testimony that it's an incompatible use," said Dorman. "Personally, I don't like the project." The Council voted to grant Jones' appeal.

The Council took time to honor a Mt. Migul student who wrote a comprehensive history of Lemon Grove. Jennifer Chell was awarded highest honors for her research paper by the San Diego Tijuana History Fair and it is being displayed by the San Diego Historical Society in Balboa Park. She received a certificate, pin and bound copy of her paper from the City.

An update on the hiring of a crossing guard at the intersection of Palm and Golden was also given. There have been five applicants and the City plans to begin interviewing next week. The goal is to have a crossing guard installed after spring break. If a crossing guard does not solve the safety problems, the City will consider installing stop signs.

In order to beef up the City's budget, the Council is now planning to attach a processing fee of $30 to business licenses. The current fee is $15 per business and $2 per employee. The processing fee does not require a vote by the people, however, an increase in the business license fee would.

The justification for the processing fee is that it costs the City approximately $47,880 to process the business license taxes, and the City estimates it will collect $45,000 in business license taxes this year. This suggests that it costs more to collect the taxes than is received in revenue from a tax that is supposed to generate revenue.

Finally, acting as the Redevelopment Agency, The Council accepted City Staff recommendation to award Plaza Landscaping Inc. with the contract for constructing the municipal parking lot on Lester Avenue.

Plaza Landscape Inc. submitted the low bid at $160,643.60, approximately $60,000 less than was estimated by the engineer/architect.

Staff recommended that some of the savings be used to install a drip irrigation system for the project instead of a low-flow spray irrigation system. The drip irrigation is more expensive to install, but it will save water and allow the City to project an image of water conservation to the public. In furthering other water conservation efforts, the City is also considering deferring the installation of trees and shrubs for the project until after the current water crisis is over.

Mount Miguel ROTC on parade

The Mt. Miguel ROTC Cadet Corps took to the field Wednesday, March 13 to demonstrate their military skills to an honored guest, the new Superintendent of Grossmont Union High School District Joanne Smith.

The review ceremony, which dates back to the Continental Army, is a chance for the ROTC Cadets to show off their marching skills and all they have learned through long hours of training, said ROTC advisor Colonel Kenneth Yenter. It also promotes tradition, honor and an esprit de corps.

The Mt. Miguel ROTC with color guard was joined by the Mt. Miguel marching band, an ROTC cadet unit from Morse High School, as well as a unit from Lincoln High School.

As part of the review ceremony Superintendent Smith, Battalion Commander Cadet Major Steve Cardinalli, Mt. Miguel Principal Brian Smith and Morse High Principal Russell Vowinkel toured the field in a close up review of the cadets.

Superintendent Smith addressed the troops saying, "I commend you on an outstanding review. You are a part of something great and wonderful and good and I commend you."

Prior to the ceremony, the Mt. Miguel ASB sponsored a B-B-Q for the ROTC units and visiting dignitaries.

East County Econonmic Development study shows people shop where they work

Thirty percent of disposable income is spent near where an employee works, while 46 percent is spent close to home. This, not surprisingly, was the finding of an East County Economic Development Council (ECEDC) study aimed at determine the overall impact of job location on local business.

The study, prepared for ECEDC by Dr. John Weeks, Director of the International Population Center at SDSU and presented at a March 13 press conference at the La Mesa Chamber of Commerce, attempted to answer the questions: do people spend money near where they work, and if so, how much?

The study saw questionnaires administered to a total of 1,096 individuals at Grossmont Center, Parkway Plaza, Marketplace at the Grove and Mission Valley Shopping Center.

Among its significant findings, the study drew a profile of the type of individual liable to spend the highest percentage of income near the workplace: "a woman aged 18-29 who works close to the shopping center, whose place of work is closer to the Center than her home is, and who goes to the Center from work."

In introducing the study, Dr. Weeks pointed to a recent California Department of Commerce study which showed manufacturing jobs to have "a more positive economic impact in a region than do retail jobs." The study showed manufacturing jobs paying double that of retail jobs, thus producing a great deal more spendable money.

"Manufacturers usually purchase labor and supplies from the local market," said Weeks, "and sell their products outside the region, therefore importing income into the region." He added that the state study indicated that

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

It is often said that the best way to keep out of trouble is to just keep our mouth shut and NEVER put anything in writing.

Obviously, I have great difficulty in obeying that rule.

A headline in this morning's paper which proclaimed salary raises and bonuses for SDG&E top brass has triggered this piece.

I am not aware of any of our City staff or elected officials taking a stand on the proposed merger of SDG&E and Southern California Edison Co., so these comments are solely my own.

I believe that the merger will and should be consummated at sometime in the future. The length of time that has transpired most probably portends that it will not be soon, but it will occur. Without intending to offend anyone or certainly to appear in favor of the negative impacts that are sure to occur, I am of this opinion because I feel that it will be best in the long run. Please accept this proclamation as a considered opinion, in light of all of the rhetoric that that has transpired in the past, and what I perceive the future holds for Southern California.

The negative impacts will be that some local employees will either have to move to Rosemead in order to keep their jobs, or quit, which will be unfortunate either way. You can bet that many of the Edison people with seniority over ours will be tickled to death to move to San Diego and bump a San Diegan.

There will be a transference of the head offices from here to there, and "local control" will eventually be diluted to some degree.

Our local governments, our newspapers and our rate-payers will have a longer distance to cover to communicate with the high "muckety mucks" of the corporation, it is certainly for sure.

There will also be simply the problem of the largest, most ponderous utility company in the country and its inherent callousness that goes with size. The cost of the merger will be tremendous with the golden, no, platinum parachutes that were apparently agreed upon in the process of our top officials voting in favor of the merger, being a drop in the bucket.

The cost of power will increase no matter what happens, because of our geographic location in the nation.

I believe that much of the money that has been spent to oppose the merger is more politically motivated than altruistic.

Financially troubled San Diego City can ill-afford the millions spent on this effort. It would have been better spent to ameliorate the harm to our local SDG&E employees that will be affected. Many of the jobs will be eliminated through attrition or early retirement, and it will not devastate those people.

In the larger company, there probably will be opportunities for San Diegans to blend into the operation and improve themselves in the doing. It will not be all negative.

The "local control" loss should not be of great significance. Actually, we deal with many large corporations everyday that are located in Detroit, Chicago or New York, so the distance factor is certainly nothing new. Rosemead is actually quite close by comparison.

I have a problem with the idea that our newspapers and city governments are so beneficial in situations such as the present merger episode. Do they help or hinder?

The plain fact is that San Diego is situated at the very corner of our country, with no power-producing resource that can furnish cheap electricity. Water power is the cheapest, and we do not even have enough to drink.

Coal is burned to generate power, as is oil, but they are numbers two and number one, respectively, in cost per kilowatt produced. Nuclear sources are so tied up in environmental red tape that they are negligible hopes for the near future. Wind and sun power potential are even further in the background.

Edison can provide us with some of the cheaper power sources to at least slow the increase in rate-payer costs. Consolidation should allow some fat-trimming and more efficiency of operation.

The Public Utilities Commission is responsible to the public to see that we are treated fairly, and I have confidence that they will.

Lastly, the alternative to the merger was posed as a governmental takeover. I would suggest that one might look at the public officials around us and then make a decision as to which will be best.

Councilman Bob Burns will address matters of concern to Lemon Grove and its citizens. If you have questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, 91946.

Winning the peace may be tougher

by Paul Treske

Almost as soon as the final guns were stilled in the Persian Gulf, a new cliche began to make the rounds: winning a war is easy ... winning the peace is hard.

As in all cliches, there is a fair degree of truth in this one, and although winning the war was by no means easy (despite its brevity), we are beginning to see the immense difficulties involved in making the peace a winner.

Civil war is the order of the day in Iraq, and the winners of the Gulf War appear uncertain as to how they'd like it to come out. On the one hand, there is a widespread desire for Saddam Hussein to wind up on the moon, or even farther away. On the other hand, some in our government - casting a wary eye toward Iran and the fundamentalist Shiites - seem to feel that maybe a neutered Saddam wouldn't be so bad after all. At least he couldn't bother anyone too much for a while. An Iraqi government run by radical Kurds and wild-eyed Shiites is not exactly the way we pictured the war's outcome.

Further south, things seem to be getting worse rather than better. Conflict appears to be growing between those Kuwaitis who remained and "toughed it out" during the horrors of the Iraqi occupation, and those, including the Emir, who left the country when the fighting started and who are only now, starting to come back. There is no power, little food and the government, which has always relied on foreigners to run things, doesn't appear to have a clue as to how to make things better.

Lastly, there appears to be a great deal of activity going on about an Arab-Israeli resolution. Secretary of State Baker has visited most of the region's capitals and apparently received a lot of oral assurances and little else. Of alarm to some has been our attempt to continue our current coziness with Syria's Hafez Assad who many see as a cross between a Saddam Hussein clone and a coiled cobra. Most certainly, the Syrian strongman has a human rights violation record that is just as horrific as Saddam's. He has long been on the outs with most of the rest of the Eastern nations, but is now hoping that his coattail involvement in the UN coalition will "rehabilitate" him.

Israel as expected, has turned a cold shoulder towards Baker's efforts. Prime minister Shamir wants a lot more assurance than we can give him, and even then, his government is not likely to look kindly upon a suggestion of land for peace. Of course, a new Israeli government might be more amenable, but certainly not in the near future. And so, while the oil wells keep burning and the oil slick keeps spreading, the winning forces are finding that winning the peace may indeed be the more difficult task. The window of opportunity is still wide open, but getting through it seems to be a most challenging task.

From Where I Sit

A Bunny Board

by Frank Andrews

The pastor of our church came over to our house and asked, "Frank, would you paint a big sign to welcome the people to our Easter sunrise service?"

This was Thursday afternoon, and he wanted it finished and delivered to the church by Palm Sunday, which was just three days away. I volunteered: "Have a 4' x 8' sheet of plywood delivered to our house early tomorrow (Friday) and I'll have it ready by Sunday."

When I arrived home about 1:30 Friday afternoon, ready to paint, I couldn't find the board that was to be delivered. Maybe the pastor changed his mind or found a more qualified volunteer, I surmised.

Saturday morning the dear pastor called, "Frank, how's the sign coming?

"I can't paint a sign until I've got something to paint it on," I answered kind of sharply."

"Paul said he brought the board over to your house about 11 a.m. Friday and laid it against the garage door," the pastor replied. "We'll get you another sheet right away so you can still have it finished by Sunday."

On the way to pick up the new sheet, my wife and I noticed a crowd of young skateboard enthusiasts a few houses down from us enjoying a brand-new skateboard ramp. We stopped and my wife asked the boys angrily, "Did you guys take that plywood board from in front of our garage?"

The young man that lived there answered my wife politely, "Someone delivered this sheet to our house yesterday and we tried to find out who sent it. Our grandmother has promised us a much-wanted ramp for so long that we kinda thought she had sent it." The boy's mother verified his story, so all was forgiven and we wished all the young skateboarders a very merry Easter.

Our Paul admitted, "I could have delivered the board to the wrong house. Isn't your house a tan color? We had recently painted our house a green color, so that was obviously the source of all the confusion.

With the second piece of plywood, the church got its big sign painted and delivered on schedule. And the boys on Angelus Avenue got their much-wanted skateboard ramp, delivered by an "Easter Bunny" named Paul.

It's the Law

Question: If a competitor sells below cost, is this always considered an anti-competitive act?

Answer: Not always. The competitor may not be in violation of any laws, if his or her actions are not motivated by anti-competitive intent.

Fears that large companies will use their superior staying power to drop prices and squeeze out smaller competitors, leaving the larger company free to charge monopoly prices, have led lawmakers to prohibit below-cost sales.

In order for below-cost sales to be prohibited, federal and state laws require the following element be shown: 1) a sale (or gift); 2) of a product or service; 3) below cost; 4) for the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition.

Because price-cutting is usually thought of as the hallmark of healthy competition, courts have taken a long, hard look at complained-of prices in order to determine whether they are pro-competitive or anti-competitive. In the process, many exceptions to the below-cost sale prohibition have developed, most having to do with what "costs" are to be used in the analysis, and whether the seller had anti-competitive intent.

Suppose, for example, that the competitor bases its below-cost pricing on the fact that prior to the commencement of its offer, its store was operating somewhat below capacity. There was excess space not occupied by existing inventory; sales people were standing around, etc. The competitor decided to solve the problem by introducing widgets, which it purchased wholesale, for a lower price than that being charged by other sellers.

The competitor reasons that all of its other expenses are costs it incurs whether or not it sells widgets. As long as it sells the widgets for a price above the wholesale purchase price, the competitor makes a profit. Thus, the competitor is able to sell its widgets at a price lower than other sellers offering the same widgets. This raises the obvious question: What are "costs" for the purpose of a predatory pricing analysis: the incremental expense of adding the widgets to the product mix or the average total costs of all sales including fixed costs?

The competitor's argument that this enhances competition by making widgets available to consumers at a lower price, has been forcefully argued by legal scholars. However, the most recent California Court of Appeals decision on the issue has rejected this approach. Influenced by the danger of large multi-product companies squeezing out smaller single-product competitors in this way, the California Court of Appeals held that a competitor's prices must exceed both its fixed and variable costs in order not to be below cost.

Federal law also applies; however, it is more complicated. If the competitor is sued in federal court

'Thank God'

by Joseph Walker

Johnny came marching home the other day.

Well. OK. His name isn't Johnny, it's Bryan. And he didn't march home from the Persian Gulf, he flew. But everything else went according to the book when our 20-year-old neighborhood hero returned from war. The men cheered. The boys shouted. The ladies all turned out. And we all felt ... well, you know - happy. And proud. And relieved to have him home.

Almost as happy and proud and relieved as Bryan was himself.

"Was I nervous?" he mused after fighting through dozens of yellow ribbons that blocked his way to the "welcome home" party at his parents' house. "No, I wouldn't really call it 'Nervous' - scared to death is more like it. You never knew from one minute to the next what you would have to deal with - the heat, the cold, the Scuds, chemical weapons. It was frightening. But we made it - we got the job done, and now, we're home. Thank God!"

Although Bryan comes from a church-going family, he has never been especially religious himself. So that last remark intrigued me. Was it just a verbal pause, I asked him, or had something spiritual happened to him in the Saudi Arabian desert?

Bryan considered my question thoughtfully.

"If you're asking if you should reserve the front pew for me every week from now on, I don't know," he said, chuckling. Then he turned suddenly serious.

"But something did happened out there," he continued, "I've said prayers all my life. But I never prayed like I did out there. In fact, there was one stretch after the ground advance started when it felt like I was praying constantly in my mind for about two days." I reminded him of what Victor Hugo once said: "There are moments when, whatever the attitude of the body, the soul is on its knees." Bryan shrugged his shoulders: "Well, I don't know anything about Victor Hugo," he said. "I just know there were times when we felt we needed help, and it seemed like only God could do more for us than we had already done for ourselves."

Bryan wasn't alone in his feeling. All around the world people were offering prayers in behalf of the men and women involved in Desert Storm. Churches throughout America experienced dramatic upturns in attendance. And President Bush called for a national day of prayer for the safety and success of our troops in the Middle East.

The liberation of Kuwait drove America to its knees in a spiritual sense. We prayed for the safety of our soldiers and for a speedy end to the fighting. And the mission was accomplished quickly, with precious little loss of American life - a fact that no less an authority than General Norman Schwarzkopf called "almost miraculous." And now I'm wondering, how many of us have remembered to thank God?

I know, I know - the news media keeps telling us that President Bush deserves credit for his firm resolve in the conflict. Meanwhile, Stormin' Norman probably had to order another jeep to carry all of the much-deserved laurel wreaths being hung around his neck. And let's not forget the significant contributions made by brave soldiers and officers and innovative scientists and technicians.

But what about God? We are quick to go to Him when we need some help. And then, we're just as quick to take credit - or bestow it upon others - for an outcome that may very well have been an answer to our prayers. It's like the man who was working on his roof and started sliding off. As he was rolling down the steep slope, he prayed with all his heart and soul: "Dear God, please help me!" But when his pants caught on a nail, miraculously stopping his fall just as he was about to go over the edge, he looked up to heaven and said, "Never mind, I've got everything under control."

It's appropriate, then, that President Bush has designated April 5-7 as national days of thanksgiving for the end of hostilities in the Persian Gulf. It will be a good opportunity to pay tribute to the men and women who represented us there. But even more than that, it will give us all the chance to focus our attention on giving thanks to God - for peace, for life, for home and family, for faith.

Which reminds me of something else Victor Hugo said: "Have courage for the great sorrows of life, and patience for the small ones. And when you have laboriously accomplished your daily task, go to sleep in peace. God is awake."

Library plans to close April 4th for computer conversion

On Thursday, April 4, County Library branches will tentatively close for one day to convert to a new automated book check-out system. The new system will be a state-of-the-art replacement for the Library's current on-line system.

The new system will be more efficient and streamlined and will speed up many of the book circulation processes.

Several services will be affected in the days prior to the closure.

From now until April 3, branches will be unable to check-out videocassettes or to take request for book reservations. Between March 25 and April 3, there will be a check-out limit of five items per person. To alleviate work for library staff during this conversion period, no books will be due back during that time. However, book return slots will remain open for returns on April 4, and the bookmobiles will operate as scheduled on this day.

This Week: Academy Award picks

Oscar night is Monday, March 25! Here's who should get what, and why.

Best Supporting Actor nominees:

Bruce Davison, "Longtime Companion. "
Andy Garcia, "The Godfather Part III."
Graham Greene, "Dances With Wolves."
Al Pacino, "Dick Tracy."
Joe Pesci, "Goodfellas."

My pick: Joe Pesci. He's violent, sadistic, terrifying ... and perfect.

Who'll win: I think Joe Pesci is due. His character may not have been likable, but his acting is great. He also had a prolific year ("Goodfellas," "Betsy's Wedding," "Home Alone"), which helps. Bruce Davison has an outside chance.

Best Supporting Actress nominees:

Annette Bening, "The Grifters."
Lorraine Bracco, "Goodfellas."
Whoopi Goldberg, "Ghost."
Diane Ladd, "Wild at Heart."
Mary McDonnell, "Dances With Wolves."

My pick: Annette Bening, whose performance is seductive and powerful, yet innocent. She's a gifted actress - Hollywood's newest and brightest asset.

Who'll win: Who knows? This category is jammed with strong performances and persuasive politics. McDonnell has the advantage of starring in a highly moral film (which the Academy loves).Ladd benefited from a strong nomination campaign, and both Bracco and Bening won critical praise for their roles. One thing's for certain, Whoopi Goldberg hasn't a chance in the world.

Best Actor nominees:

Kevin Costner, "Dances With Wolves."
Robert De Niro, "Awakenings."
Gerard Depardieu, "Cyrano de Bergerac."
Richard Harris, "The Field."
Jermey Irons, "Reversal of Fortune."

My pick: Richard Harris, an amazing actor in an amazing role.

Who'll win: Sadly, Harris doesn't have much of a chance, primarily because "The Field" is a little-known film and probably wasn't seen by all Academy voters. The Oscar will go to Irons or De Niro who gave well-respected, finely-crafted performances. Depardieu has the disadvantage of appearing in a foreign language film, and Costner - although likable - didn't do anything that we didn't see last year in "Field of Dreams."

Best Actress nominees:

Kathy Bates, "Misery."
Anjelica Huston, "The Grifters."
Julia Roberts, "Pretty Woman."
Meryl Streep, "Postcards From the Edge."
Joanne Woodward, "Mr. & Mrs. Bridge."

My pick: Anjelica Huston. "The Grifters" was a great film, and Huston was one reason why. She portrays a woman torn between love for her son and a love for money.

Who'll win: Huston has the highest quality, but Woodward has the strongest politics, so it might go either way. Kathy Bates was good (but not Oscar quality). Streep only showed she could sing, and the fact that Julia Roberts was even nominated is a joke.

Best Director nominees:

Francis Ford Coppola, "The Godfather Part III."
Kevin Costner, "Dances With Wolves."
Stephen Frears, "The Grifters."
Barbet Schroeder, "Reversal of Fortune."
Martin Scorsese, "Goodfellas."

My pick: A tie! Francis Ford Coppola and Martin Scorsese. Whenever you mention Godfather III, people only want to rag on Sofia Coppola. Don't overlook her father's work on this brilliant and moving finale to his masterpiece. Scorsese is equally impressive - "Goodfellas," is the greatest example of mood-enhancing camera work I've seen.

Who'll win: Unless the Academy is seriously misguided, Scorsese will win. The fact that he was overlooked a few years ago for "Raging Bull" considerably helps his chances.

Best Picture nominees:

"Awakenings"
"Dances With Wolves"
"Ghost"
"The Godfather Part III"
"Goodfellas"

My pick: "Goodfellas." Now, I know a lot of people are crazy about "Dances With Wolves," and I like it too. But after multiple viewings of both "Dances" and "Goodfellas," the latter emerges as the finest production. Costner's epic is tattered by overblown moralizing and harsh stereotypes. Yes, I understand that Native Americans were badly persecuted, but do I have to accept that every U.S. soldier, other than Costner, was evil? Think about it - they killed his horse, shot his dog, they even used his diary as toilet paper! We get the point, Kevin.

"Goodfellas," however, is a flawless portrayal of cruelty in which villains are not necessarily evil. Martin Scorsese led his entire cast to perfect performances and crafted a visually stunning look at the underworld.

Who'll win: Probably "Dances with Wolves." It was a creative struggle, enjoys incredible popularity and satisfies a certain amount of historical guilt. It is a good movie ... just not the best.

Nominations the Academy forgot:

"Avalon" and "Miller's Crossing, "Best Picture.
"Miller's Crossing" and "The Cook, The Thief, His Wife And Her Lover," Best Cinematography.
"The Hunt for Red October," Best Visual Effects.
Basil Poledouris, Best Original Score, "The Hunt for Red October."
Gene Hackman, Best Supporting Actor, "Postcards From the Edge."
Harrison Ford, Best Actor, "Presumed Innocent."
Al Pacino, Best Actor, "The Godfather Part III."
John Hurt, Best Supporting Actor, "The Field."
"What Can You Lose," Best Original Song, "Dick Tracy."

in California and is proven by plaintiff that the competitor's prices are below average variable costs, that fact by itself will be deemed evidence of intent to injure competition. However, if the competitor's prices are above its average variable, but not its average total costs, the plaintiff will have to present additional evidence to prove predatory intent.

The federal approach produces yet another difference, but in this instance, it works in plaintiff's favor. In California state courts, if the evidence shows that competitor's prices are above its average total costs (fixed and variable), it is conclusively presumed to be legal. Not so, in federal court in California, for even if competitor's price is above its average total costs, such price can still be predatory if plaintiff can present "clear and convincing" evidence that competitor acted with intent to injure competition.

A plaintiff may very well have a legitimate predatory pricing complaint, particularity under state law. However, plaintiff must be prepared for the contention that he or she is not seeking to protect competition, but rather, protection from competition. Plaintiff should expect the courts, both federal and state, to be extremely sensitive to that possibility.

Sliffe-Benner to demonstrate at next artists' meeting

April is the month that the Foothills Art Association members who have exhibited three times during the year, present their choicest work for a juried show. This show will begin Friday, April 5, and will continue Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. until May 7. The public is welcome to view this exhibit.

Also, an artist demonstration is part of each regular Foothills meeting. The next demonstrating artist is scheduled after the next regular meeting Thursday, April 4. Joyce Sliffe-Benner, an artist and instructor who has worked for many years as a painter, designer, muralist and silk fabric painter, will be demonstrating her technique. Interested artists are welcome.

Foothills is a non-profit organization of local artists. The gallery is next to the library at 8051 University Ave.

Facefinders model search returns to Grossmont

The Facefinders Scouting Network, used by more than 25 of the world's leading modeling agencies and casting offices, will kick off its second annual model search at Grossmont Center, on Saturday, March 23 at 2 p.m.

Anyone over the age of four can enter the search at no cost, simply by submitting a photo with an entry form to Grossmont Center's Information Booth, the day of the kick-off or anytime afterward until May 1.

The competition is divided into three categories: Baby Faces (ages 4-8), Future Faces (ages 9-12) and Career Faces (13 and over). Entrants under 18 will require parental consent to enter. Three preliminary competitions will be held in Grossmont Center's Broadway Court on April 9, 23 and May 7, each beginning at 4 p.m. Finalists from the preliminaries will compete in a final competition at Grossmont Center on May 18 at noon, where judges will select two winners from each category - one male and one female -- to go on to the The Facefinders World Class Expo in Palm Springs in October.

PUBLIC NOTICES

IMPORTANT NOTICE: IF YOUR PROPERTY IS IN FORECLOSURE BECAUSE YOU ARE BEHIND IN YOUR PAYMENTS, IT MAY BE SOLD WITHOUT ANY COURT ACTION, and you may have the legal right to bring your account in good standing by paying all of your past due payments plus permitted costs and expenses within the time permitted by law for reinstatement of your account, which is normally five business days prior to the date set for the sale of your property. No sale date may be set until three months from the date this notice of default may be recorded (which date of recordation appears on this notice). This amount is $2,100.00, as of March 1, 1991, and will increase until your account becomes current. While your property is in foreclosure, you still must pay other obligations (such as insurance and taxes) required by your note and deed of trust or mortgage. If you fail to make future payments on the loan, pay taxes on the property, provide insurance on the property, or pay other obligations as required in the note and deed of trust or mortgage, the beneficiary or mortgagee may insist that you do so in order to reinstate your account in good standing. In addition the beneficiary or mortgagee may require as a condition to reinstatement that you provide reliable written evidence that you paid all senior liens, property taxes, and hazard insurance premiums. Upon your written request, the beneficiary or mortgagee will give you a written itemization of the entire amount you must pay. You may not have to pay the entire unpaid portion of your account, even though full payment was demanded, but you must pay all amounts in default at the time payment is made. However, you and your beneficiary or mortgagee may mutually agree in writing prior to the time the notice of sale is posted (which may not be earlier than the end of the three-month period stated above) to, among other things, (1) provide additional time in which to cure the default by transfer of the property or otherwise; (2) establish a schedule of payments in order to cure your default; or both (1) and (2). Following the expiration of the time period referred to in the first paragraph of this notice, unless the obligation being foreclosed upon or a separate written agreement between you and your creditor permits a longer period, you have only the legal right to stop the sale of your property by paying the entire amount demanded by your creditor. To find out the amount you must pay, or to arrange for payment to stop the foreclosure, or if your property is in foreclosure for any other reason, contact: CASA DEL CIELO HOMEOWNERS ASSOCIATION c/o Association Assessment Service Co., 1800 North Broadway, Suite 100, Santa Ana, California 92706; Telephone (714) 953-6810, Extension 212. If you have any questions, you should contact a lawyer or the government agency which may have insured your loan. Notwithstanding the fact that your property is in foreclosure, you may offer your property for sale, provided the sale is concluded prior to the conclusion of the foreclosure. Remember, YOU MAY LOSE LEGAL RIGHTS IF YOU DO NOT TAKE PROMPT ACTION.

Notice of Default and Election to Sell Under Assessment Lien

ASSOCIATION ASSESSMENT SERVICE CO., a California corporation, as duly designated, appointed and acting Trustee of CASA DEL CIELO HOMEOWNERS ASSOCIATION, a California non-profit corporation, "the Association", pursuant to the provisions of that certain Declarations of Covenants, Conditions and Restrictions recorded June 6, 1979 in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Diego, State of California, as Recorder's Instrument No. 79-233387, and to the Association's Articles and By-Laws, or other Operating Regulations, which Declaration, Articles and By-Laws, or Operating Regulations, and any supplement(s) or amendment(s) thereto imposed specific obligations to pay assessments on the owner(s) of that real property described in the Notice of Delinquent Assessment recorded January 29, 1991 in said office, as Recorder's Instrument No. 91-0041157, known as 31948 #5 Del Cielo Este, Bonsall, California 92003, and purportedly owned by JEANETTE C. MOTTA, "the Debtor", HEREBY GIVES NOTICE that a breach and default in such obligations has occurred, the nature of said breach and default being the Debtor's failure to pay the amounts specified in said Notice of Delinquent Assessment, and that, by reason of said breach and default, the Association has declared all such amounts to be immediately due and payable and has directed the undersigned to sell or to cause said real property to be sold in order to satisfy the Debtor's obligations.

Citizens needed for civilian review board to investigate complaints against peace officers

Applications for membership on a civilian review board which will investigate complaints against County peace officers are now available at every public library in San Diego County.

County Chief Administrative Officer Norman W. Hickey said this new panel, approved by voters last November as Proposition A, will have the authority to review citizen allegations of excessive force, harassment, false arrest or misconduct by officers in the Sheriff's or Probation departments. The panel will also be able to subpoena witnesses regarding incidents occurring on or after November 7, 1990. In addition to reviewing citizen complaints, the panel will also investigate the death of any individual arising out of actions of peace officers.

Known officially as the Citizens Law Enforcement Review Board, the panel will consist of 11 San Diego County residents who will be screened and nominated by Hickey.

Actual appointments will be made by the County Board of Supervisors.

Hickey said the citizens, once chosen, will be required to complete a training course which will include ride-alongs with deputies, visits to each detention facility, and participation in selected Training Academy exercises. The panelists will be selected to reflect age, sex, socioeconomic status, ethnic and racial background, and geographic distribution, said Hickey. The 11 citizens will serve three-year terms without compensation.

The application form for the Review Board is available at all city and county libraries after March 18, and must be submitted by 5 p.m. on Friday, April 5.

A background investigation, including verification of data and a check of possible criminal records, will be made of each applicant.

County employees and peace officers are not eligible to serve on the board.

"creation of 100 new manufacturing jobs will ultimately generate an additional 480 jobs within a region as a direct and indirect result of the spending of the business and its employees."

In response to questions pointed to La Mesa's lack of room for manufacturing and expansion, Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Gordon Austin stressed that additional manufacturing everywhere within the East County region would benefit the entire region as well as the individual communities.

ECEDC President Dana Quittner stressed that for communities having land identified for manufacturing, the study suggest that they be held onto for that purpose. She warned, however, that communities should be especially sensitive to the interrelationship of these lands to other nearby land uses.

Learn to swim during spring break at the YMCA

The YMCA of San Diego County will be conducting the National YMCA Learn to Swim campaign during spring break.

Children who are non-swimmers or beginners are invited to participate in a daily 1/2-hour swim lesson during that week. Certified staff and volunteers will teach the lessons.

Registration is now being accepted for the program at the Davis/Grossmont YMCA at 8881 Dallas Street. as well as other YMCAs throughout San Diego. At Davis, the program is for children ages 3 to 12. The cost is $5, with both morning and afternoon classes.

Easter events at Foothills United Methodist Church

Foothills United Methodist Church will hold the following Easter-related events:

Sunday, March 24: Palm Sunday -- regular services at 9 a.m. and 10:45 a.m.

Maundy Thursday, March 28: A spaghetti dinner will be made by the youth and served starting at 6 p.m.

Reservations are needed. Also, a communion service will be held at 7 p.m. Special music by the Foothills Chancel Choir entitled, "It Took A Miracle," will be featured.

March 31: Easter Sunday -- 7 a.m. early service with youth. At 9 a.m. and 10:45 a.m., services featuring the Chancel Choir, brass and handbells. The sermon will be "Come and See, Go and Tell."

For more information, call the church office at 670-4009.

Peter Cotton Tail will be hoppping down the bunny trail to Lemon Grove Saturday, March 30 at the 12th Annual Recreation Center Easter Egg Hunt. The fun begins at 9 a.m. in Berry Street Park.
